News Report From Edmonton

By Ken Mason

EDMONTON—Provincial Liberals have been pushed well out of the limelight in recent weeks, what with the five-year plan unveiled by Social Credit and the Conservatives' leadership convention.

Last week, in an effort to grab a few headlines for themselves, the Liberals took the wraps off the agricultural policy they will be offering to Alberta voters in the next general election.

A main feature of the agricultural program would be a "comprehensive" system of farm credit at low interest, covering the whole field of farm operation, including livestock, equipment, farm homes, land and improvements.

According to a release issued by Harold McLaughlin, MLA for Stony Plain and chairman of the party's agriculture committee, the farm loan program would be co-ordinated with existing federal plans.

The agricultural program and other planks in the party's platform will be submitted for approval to the Liberal leadership convention slated for Edmonton Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

Other aims of the farm policy would be to:

—Co-operate with the federal government in developing a satisfactory system of crop insurance.

—Give rural areas more help in acquiring modern facilities, such as telephones, and natural gas, through planned development and interest-free loans.

—Expand and improve district agriculturist services and give more aid to municipalities for agricultural service board activities.

—Make better use of agricultural school facilities by transferring them to the department of education, and with the addition of trade and vocational training courses.

In their policy statement the Liberals also call for central administration of water control and conservation under one department, which would administer water for power, irrigation, domestic and industrial use.

They also recommend a provincially-assisted system of seed distribution aimed at increasing the use of grass and forage crops, and development of a community pasture system along the lines of those operating in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

An overall plan to meet the possibility of a food shortage in drought years is suggested, along with an "impartial survey" as a first step toward a solution of the controversy over grazing leases in forest reserves.

Look for more policy statements from the Liberals between now and the leadership convention, and you can expect the Tories to be making noises also from time to time. They both know they'll have to come up with something pretty strong to counter Social Credit's five-year plan.

The way things are going, with the rival political parties trying so hard to outbid each other for public favor, Alberta's next election campaign should be a lively one.

NEW FISH & GAME CHIEF—Alberta has a new fish and game chief. He's Curt P. Smith Jr., well-known sportsman, and he's walking into a tough job at a particularly tough time in the field of wildlife management in Alberta.

The appointment of Mr. Smith has political overtones. A powerful and vociferous group of sportsmen has been pressing the government to appoint a full-time fish and game administrator. In the past, the government has resisted the pressure, but now apparently it has decided to yield.

Eric S. Huestis, who has been director of forestry and fish and game commissioner for the past 17 years, will now devote all his time to forestry. The announcement of the change mentioned that the new five-year plan will mean a lot more work in forestry.

Mr. Smith, an agriculture graduate and former president of the Alberta Fish and Game Association and Western Canada Fish and Game Council, is at present the assistant superintendent at Elk Island National Park.

In his new job, he'll be under Park. He takes over his new post a lot of political pressure from many quarters. Nothing, but

The Harvest of Plenty:

The fruit and vegetable kingdom offer very brilliant colors and interesting shapes that lend itself well to creating attractive arrangements representing the harvest of plenty.

Apples, crabapples, citrus fruits, grapes of all colors and sizes and gold and green pears make excellent fruit material. Vegetables to use with fruit, or alone, include cucumbers, red tomatoes, yellow corn, carrots and red cabbage.

Since fruits and vegetables lend themselves well to the idea of domesticity, heavier containers such as wood, copper, pottery, bronze or bamboo can be used. Weeds, seed pods and berries having a rough texture are out of harmony in fine glass containers and as a result pottery or heavier containers should be used. Reed baskets and place mats also are sometimes used very effectively for arrangements.

Gourds maybe dried and lacquered. They look well in wood, silver or metal containers and make an attractive everyday arrangement.

Those who become interested in the arrangement of dry materials soon find that the possibilities are endless. Swamps and fields yield a rich harvest of cattails, swamp grasses, thistle, and sand bars or rose hips. Seed pods are also worth studying for dried material arrangements. Cakes of various conifers are also effective and that brings to mind the gourds, decorative corn, including their husks, and cereal grains which are often combined with them.

Either for the skeleton lines of arrangements or as containers for dried material, gnarled dry tree roots or pieces of silvery drift wood are unexcelled. A very effective arrangement of this type is the simple beauty of pussy willow branches against driftwood or a gnarled tree root. Keep your eyes open for these gifts of nature when you are in the wild.

Collect some of the satiny white or scaly fungi which are found on gray Birch and other decaying trees. These along with colored stone and bleached wood can be used for focal interest or accessories in dried compositions.

Of all the arts in the home none gives more pleasure and enjoyment than that of a flower arrangement.

In 1898 Canada's Sir William Mulock persuaded Britain and the other countries in the Empire to accept a two-cent or penny postage rate, which meant that thousands of people throughout the Empire were able to write one another two or three times as often as before.

In Canada's first federal election, in 1897, voting took place from August 7th to September 20th.

nothing can stir up controversy like fish and game policies. And experts agree that wildlife management is one thing that should be based strictly on science, without any inside interference.

Mr. Huestis solved the problem of outside pressure by being tough. Once policy was established, he wouldn't waver. He's tough enough to tell anyone—no matter how important—to go to blazes. This, of course, made a number of people unhappy.

Whether Mr. Smith can handle one of the toughest jobs in the provincial government and still keep in 1958, happy is anyone's guess at this point. But initial reaction from sportsmen is that the idea of a full-time fish and game chief is a good one.

Bond Conversion Ends Monday

After next Monday, local residents are reminded, it will no longer be possible to exchange old Victory Bonds for the new, higher rate Conversion Loan Bonds.

Bonds may be exchanged up until the close of business on September 15th. After that, the government offer expires.

With well over 80 per cent of the new Conversion Loan now taken up, it is indicated that people of this community followed the example they set during the war and invested heavily in these government securities. There may be a few, however, who for one reason or another have delayed converting and they should go to their bank or investment dealer at once and take advantage of the "rights" which go with their Victory Bonds.

Some local people who held only one or two Victory Bonds and who would like a larger investment in Conversion issues are being advised that they may increase their holdings by purchasing additional Victory Bonds and then converting them. This also applies to those who have no Victory Bonds and who would now like to become investors in Canada.

MENTAL HEALTH ASS'N CAMPAIGN

Support of the general public in all cities, towns and rural communities of Alberta outside of Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge is being invited for the work of the Canadian Mental Health Association in a province-wide financial campaign which will open on October 15 it was announced this week by the provincial president, Dr. H. E. Smith of the University of Alberta.

The campaign, which has the approval of the Department of Public Welfare, will be the first time the CMHA has asked for funds on a local basis in Alberta outside of Calgary, Edmonton and Lethbridge. Total objective has been set at $16,000 for the October campaign.

Local committees are being organized in many communities to conduct the campaign. In many areas the local branches of the Farm Women's Union of Alberta and Women's Institutes are sponsoring the drive. The campaign is endorsed by Mrs. C. T. Armstrong, Provincial President of the Farm Women's Union of Alberta and Mrs. T. H. Howes, President, Alberta Women's Institutes.

WILD OATS

OTTAWA, Aug. 20—Fall cultivation reduces the number of wild oats in a field.

This conclusion was reached by Agronomist E. V. McCurdy from tests made at the Experimental Farm, Indian Head, Sask.

However, it was also demonstrated that fall work partially destroys stubble. Thus, stubble should be left undisturbed unless a fair degree of weed control is assured by fall cultivation.

For the tests, a number of infested stubble plots were disked at different times—the first September 20, or, in a year when harvest was late, as soon as possible after the crop was combined.

Some of the other plots were disked three and six weeks later. The remainder were worked in the spring, some as early as possible and the rest just before seeding.

In each of the past three years, fall work has had definite value, according to Mr. McCurdy.

Plots worked in the fall had a denser growth of both volunteer grain and wild oats than those worked only in the spring. This growth was destroyed before seeding.

Fewer wild oats were noted in plots that had been worked in the fall than when work was delayed until spring.

Disking in early October, when wild oats have been given more chance to dry out before being buried, appeared to result in better control than when the work was done in September.

The first YMCA in North America was organized in Montreal in 1851, seven years after the founding of the Young Men's Christian Association in London, England, by George Williams, a dry goods clerk.

Kinsella News

The sympathy of the community is extended to relatives and friends on the death of Mr. Louis Overbo of Edmonton.

The lovely fall weather prevailing is enabling the farmers to get their threshing done.

Mr. Ron Nease of Edmonton, who spent his early childhood here, was renewing acquaintances in Kinsella district on Saturday.

Kinsella School re-opened on September 2nd with about 110 children enrolling. The teachers are as follows: Grades 1 and 2, Mrs. D. Rohrer; Grades 3 and 4, Mrs. A. Enger; Grades 5 and 6, Miss H. Hryhchuk; Grades 7 and 8, Mr. J. W. Wilkinson; Grades 9, 10 and 11, Mrs. D. Likness; Principal, Mr. J. W. Wilkinson.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Corbett and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Corbett and son David of Edmonton visited in and around Kinsella on Saturday.

The Kinsella United Church re-opened for service on Sunday, Sept. 7th. Owing to renovation being done to the interior of the church, the service was held in the basement. The Sunday School also re-opened.

Mr. Charlie Collier of Edmonton met with an accident early last Saturday, September 6th. While working in the CNR pit, south of town, Mr. Collier had the misfortune to lose a leg.

Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. J. McKie of the death of Mrs. J. P. Bowden in Hamilton, Ontario.

Donations to the Kinsella United Church Improvement Fund in memory of Mrs. J. Johnston and Mrs. H. Bowles from Mrs. C. Powell; and in memory of Mr. Louis Overbo from Mrs. R. Stevens.

SEEDTIME and HARVEST

DON'T LOSE DOLLARS! HARVEST YOUR BARLEY CAREFULLY

Barley now ranks as the second most important grain crop in the agricultural economy of Western Canada. Barley is a crop, however, that must be harvested and threshed with care if the highest possible returns are to be obtained.

Top Quality Essential. In recent years over 40 per cent of the barley grown and marketed in the Prairie Provinces has been bought by the malting and milling industries on a premium basis. Besides, farmers who produce this type of barley are able to benefit from the over-the-quota marketing privileges. In other words, the production of top quality barley that is acceptable to the malting and milling trades not only gives the grower a higher income, but also provides him with an important source of ready cash.

Present Harvest Losses. The main causes responsible for lowering the quality, and hence the market value of barley are: (1) Harvesting too early. Barley should not be harvested until the kernels are plump and well matured! Green and immature kernels are a serious degrading factor. (2) Improper scathing. The swath should be laid properly on the stubble so that the barley heads will not come in contact with the ground and become discolored. Good kernel color is important in barley. (3) Incorrect adjustment of combine or thresher. Skinned, peeled, and broken kernels are decidedly objectionable in malting and milling barley. Make sure that your combine or thresher is properly adjusted to do a good job of threshing. Slow cylinder speeds and keeping the concaves, sieves and wind blast properly adjusted at all times will reduce to the minimum the amount of kernel damage. (4) Rough handling of threshed grain. Damaged grain sugars and elevators, and their careless operation can be the cause of skinned, peeled, and broken kernels. It pays well to use a little extra caution in handling barley.

Don't lose dollars. Harvest, thresh, and handle your 1958 barley crop carefully.

Hardware Disease

Adult dairy cows have inborn eating habits that cause no end of all sorts of foreign materials. Bolts and small round stones usually cause no ill effects but sharp metal objects may penetrate through the stomach wall and lodge in vital organs often causing death. Dr. G. R. Whennham, Veterinarian from the Alberta Veterinary Laboratory says nails are common among findings but he recalls a cow that swallowed a splintered bone 8-10" long and another which incredibly devoured a hardwood lat 20" long. Staples, wire from bales and other scraps of metal have also been found.

Keep dairy cows away from buildings under construction where nails and odds and ends accumulate, says Dr. Whennham. Care taken in cutting wire from bales and in removing other sources of possible damage will also help in preventing this disease. Make sure there are no metal objects in grain.

Symptoms noticeable to the farmer appear only when penetration of the stomach wall has occurred. Some are milk production dropping to almost nothing overnight, cows running a temperature, stiffness in front legs, arching of the back, grunting when breathing and drop in appetite. Surgery has been effective as a cure in some instances, in others, veterinary practitioners have administered strong magnets to localize the metal objects within the stomach.
